International Disputes

Our Caribbean-focused arbitration and litigation team has acted both for governments and corporate investors across the Caribbean - from Belize to Trinidad, and from Turks & Caicos to Grenada - in ground-breaking constitutional cases, and in complex, high-stakes, investment treaty and commercial arbitrations concerning disputes across all sectors.

We routinely advise states, international organizations, private companies, and individuals on the most complex international law matters, including treaty interpretation and enforcement; boundary disputes; investment disputes; universal and extraterritorial jurisdiction; privileges and immunities; and international environmental law. With a deep bench of experts in public international law, investor-state arbitration, commercial arbitration, and international litigation, we can bring the weight of this experience to bear on individual matters, including helping clients navigate disputes that cut across these disciplines.
